

The 2019 QEIMC Masterplan – Looking to the Future

With the ambitious objectives of the 2010 Masterplan now largely met, the Trust has been developing a new Master Planning instrument which guides the vision of continued growth and improvement of the campus into the future as a leading hub for clinical health, education and research activities.

The QEIMC Trust and Hames Sharley architects have been working together to create a new Masterplan which is now complete. The 2019 Masterplan considers the significant stakeholder and community feedback that was collected during the consultation period and engagement activities throughout 2018 and 2019.

Examples of groups and organisations consulted during this period include State Government agencies, local councils, surrounding hospitals and health service providers, universities, research organisations and the local community, including local residents associations and QEIMC neighbours.

This diverse feedback has been instrumental in informing a fresh and holistic new Masterplan. With it, the QEIMC Trust will aim to continue sustainably and innovatively developing the campus, fostering a world class centre of clinical healthcare, medical research and education that engages with and balances the needs of campus users, and the local community.
